At Buffalo she saw the Pan-American Exposition in its completeness, and extended her visit to Niagara Falls.

There is a man in California very much needed in Florida. He is able to tell of the whereabouts of oil from the surface indications that only the drill is supposed to be able to disclose, after journeying hundreds and sometimes thousands of feet in the direction of the earth's center. In successfully locating oil lands Mr. Jones is assisted by an instrument which he calls the "Electro-Magneto-Hydrograph." It would pay to have Mr. Jones come to Florida.

The Chattanooga Times pertinently remarks that "the right to live" is more precious than "the right to vote," and adds: "The negroes who went to Chicago in the hope of securing work, which was denied them at the point of shot-guns, are returning to Alabama, where no embargo is placed on their honest toil. It is being rapidly shown that even with their 'grandfather' clauses, the Southern States offer the negro the only safe refuge for the enjoyment of life, liberty and the pursuit of an honest living."

A Word to Lumber and Turpentine Operators.

To the Editor of the Banner:

I want to make an appeal to the lumber and turpentine operators in this section of Florida.

It is now costing these men more than forty cents per animal per day to feed them, while this can easily be done at a cost not to exceed ten cents per animal per day, thus effecting a saving to the operator of not less than one hundred dollars per animal per annum.

Multiply the number of animals employed, gentlemen, by one hundred dollars and you readily perceive the profit to your business.

It is sufficient to support your family in luxury.

The secret is this: Stop the practice of buying grain and hay from the West and feed your horses, mules and cows with cassava, velvet beans and hay grown on the farms around your home.

If you have not the time and inclination to produce these crops yourself make a contract with some of your neighbor farmers, who are trying under adverse conditions to make a living by tilling the soil, and who will be benefited equally with yourself by your patronage.

There is a prevailing opinion that mules and horses which are worked hard must be fed on corn, oats and western hay. You were never more mistaken, gentlemen; horses and mules fed with cassava and velvet beans, or a small quantity of hay, which can be produced at home, will keep in finer condition and perform as many hours' work per day as when fed with corn and oats, and at the same time you have the satisfaction of knowing that you are helping your neighbor, while effecting a positive saving of 75 per cent. along these lines of your own expenses.

Begin right now to secure your cassava seed for planting next spring. There are farmers all over the state who will agree to save the seed for you. You will find such at Ocala, McIntosh, Lake Mary, Spring Garden, Lowell, Bartow, Fort Meade and Homeland.

You can get velvet beans for planting in any quantity at Fort Meade.

If you are not willing to trust my judgment and the experience of such men as Prof. H. E. Stockbridge, Dr. Inman, F. E. Perkins, Mr. Wardell, Wm. Lisle and Mr. Gaitskill, try a very small area yourself and watch results.

To successfully raise cassava you must select a dry, sandy soil. Cassava does not like wet feet. Break the soil well in February and harrow carefully in early March. Have the soil nicely prepared. With a straight shovel plow mark off rows four feet apart each way. Having cut the cassava seed or stems about four inches long, drop two pieces in each cross or check, and let the boy who drops it step on it so as to bring it in closer contact with the soil. Cover with two furrows with a shovel plow, and just before the young shoots appear run over the rows with a roller or board.

Immediately after the young shoots appear the field may be plowed as deeply as you like, but all after cultivation must be as shallow as possible, the broad, flat cotton sweep, sufficiently broad to clear a row with two furrows is the best implement for this purpose. Plow in both directions, alternating. This will save hoe work. Cultivate sufficiently often to prevent a start of grass and weeds till about the first of August, then leave it alone.

You may begin to use the roots for feeding by October 1st, and continue throughout the winter. The roots should be taken from the ground only as needed for use, as they do not do well if kept for more than a week.

Think of the thousands of dollars which might and ought to be saved to the mill and turpentine operators by this process, and think of the benefits which should and will accrue to our home farms when we learn to use the nutritious forage they can produce.

Try it, gentlemen, and be convinced.

With best wishes for your success.

A. and I. Agt. Plant System.
